

The 7-Day High-Fiber Meal Plan

A week of real food that keeps you full past 3 PM. No powders, no twelve-dollar smoothies, no fourteen-ingredient salads.

Here's the thing about fiber: most of us get around 15 grams a day, which is roughly half of what the label-reading crowd aims for. Not because fiber is hard to find. It's in beans, oats, fruit, and basically everything your grandma cooked. It's just that nobody plans for it.

So I planned it for you. Seven days, three meals and a snack each, landing between 30 and 34 grams a day. Regular grocery store ingredients, meals you'd actually cook on a Wednesday after work, and a grocery list at the back so you can do the whole week in one store run.

How to use this thing

- Ease in. If your current fiber situation is a granola bar and good intentions, don't jump straight to 34 grams on day one. Start with a few of these meals and work up over the week.
- Drink more water than usual. Fiber and water are a package deal. Skipping the water part is how people end up mad at beans.
- Swap freely. Any bean for any bean, any berry for any berry. The numbers barely move.
- The gram counts are estimates, not lab results. Close enough is the whole philosophy here.
- Underlined meals link to full recipes on daily-life-hacks.com. The rest are simple enough to wing.

Print it, stick it on the fridge, and let the beans do their thing.

The Plan, Part One / Days 1 & 2

DAY 1

34g fiber

BREAKFAST	Savory oatmeal with a fried egg and avocado Oats aren't legally required to be sweet. A runny egg changes the whole conversation.	9g fiber
LUNCH	Quinoa salad with chickpeas and crunchy vegetables Make it once, eat it twice. It actually gets better after a night in the fridge.	8g fiber
DINNER	Red lentil curry over brown rice The lentils melt into the coconut broth and do all the work for you.	12g fiber
SNACK	Crispy roasted chickpeas Junk food cosplay, in the best possible way.	5g fiber

DAY 2

34g fiber

BREAKFAST	Chia pudding with raspberries Five minutes tonight, breakfast tomorrow. Your morning self will be genuinely grateful.	9g fiber
LUNCH	White bean and kale soup with whole grain bread The bread is for dragging through the bowl. That part's not optional.	10g fiber
DINNER	Black bean tacos, two of them Faster than the drive-through line, and nobody asks where the meat went.	11g fiber
SNACK	Apple with peanut butter Old school. Still undefeated.	4g fiber

Keep It Rolling / Days 3 & 4

DAY 3

30g fiber

BREAKFAST	Yogurt parfait with berries and granola Read the granola label first. Some of them are dessert wearing a health costume.	7g fiber
LUNCH	High-fiber burrito bowl The fourteen-dollar office bowl, except you made four of them on Sunday.	12g fiber
DINNER	Sheet pan salmon and vegetables One pan, thirty minutes, one thing to wash.	7g fiber
SNACK	Popcorn, three cups Popcorn is a whole grain. Feel free to mention that at parties.	4g fiber

DAY 4

34g fiber

BREAKFAST	Avocado toast on whole grain, two slices Yes, it's a cliché. It's also 9 grams of fiber before 8 AM.	9g fiber
LUNCH	Tabbouleh with chickpeas Mostly parsley, which sounds wrong and tastes right.	8g fiber
DINNER	Three-bean chili with corn The fiber heavyweight of the week. Make extra, it freezes like a champ.	12g fiber
SNACK	A pear The most underrated item in the produce aisle. Five grams, zero prep.	5g fiber

Past the Hump / Days 5 & 6

DAY 5

32g fiber

BREAKFAST	Bran muffin and a banana A bran muffin that doesn't taste like a coaster. They exist, I promise.	7g fiber
LUNCH	Farro bowl with roasted vegetables and lemon tahini Chewy, nutty, and it holds up in the fridge for days.	9g fiber
DINNER	Black bean burger on a whole wheat bun, with slaw One that actually holds its shape. No crumbling burgers on my watch.	12g fiber
SNACK	Carrots and hummus The snack drawer classic. Store-bought hummus is fine, homemade is cheaper.	4g fiber

DAY 6

30g fiber

BREAKFAST	Sheet pan breakfast hash with eggs and sweet potatoes Weekend breakfast that cooks itself while you drink coffee.	6g fiber
LUNCH	Split pea soup Twelve grams in one bowl. The peas are doing serious heavy lifting.	12g fiber
DINNER	Stuffed portobellos with quinoa, spinach, and feta Fancy enough for company, easy enough for a Tuesday. Add a side salad.	8g fiber
SNACK	Two no-bake energy balls They disappear fast if you leave them on the counter. Portion accordingly.	4g fiber

The Victory Lap / Day 7

DAY 7		33g fiber
BREAKFAST	Oatmeal with raspberries and almonds Raspberries are quietly one of the highest-fiber fruits out there. About 8 grams a cup.	9g fiber
LUNCH	Beans and rice Twenty minutes, one pot. Beans and rice don't need a motivational speech.	10g fiber
DINNER	Creamy tomato orzo with white beans, one pot The orzo gets weirdly creamy as it cooks. Nobody will suspect the beans.	10g fiber
SNACK	A black bean brownie. Yes, really. Nobody can tell. That's the entire point.	4g fiber

Six Things That Make This Week Easier

- 1 Canned beans aren't cheating. Rinse them and move on with your life. If you'd rather cook dried beans from scratch, there's a guide for that on the site too.
- 2 Cook grains once, use them three times. A pot of quinoa on Sunday shows up in salads, bowls, and stuffed mushrooms all week without complaining.
- 3 Leftovers are the plan, not a side effect. The chili, the soup, and the curry all taste better on day two. Cook once, eat twice, feel smug.
- 4 Water. Again. I said it on page one and I'm saying it here, because it's the difference between loving this week and writing me a strongly worded letter.
- 5 Keep frozen vegetables around. They were frozen at peak season and they don't judge you for forgetting about them for a month.
- 6 Don't chase perfect numbers. If you land at 25 grams instead of 34, you're still way ahead of the average. Close counts.

The Grocery List / One Store Run

Everything below covers the full week for one person, with leftovers built in. Check your pantry first. You probably own half the grains aisle already.

PRODUCE

- ☐ Avocados, 3
- ☐ Bananas, 2
- ☐ Apples, 2
- ☐ Pears, 2
- ☐ Raspberries, 2 cups (frozen works)
- ☐ Carrots, 1 lb
- ☐ Celery, 1 bunch
- ☐ Onions, 2
- ☐ Garlic, 1 head
- ☐ Lemons, 2
- ☐ Kale, 1 bunch
- ☐ Baby spinach, 1 bag
- ☐ Fresh parsley and mint (tabbouleh)
- ☐ Slaw mix or a small cabbage
- ☐ Sweet potatoes, 2
- ☐ Portobello caps, 4
- ☐ Salad greens, 1 box
- ☐ Bell peppers, 2

FRIDGE & PROTEIN

- ☐ Eggs, 1 dozen
- ☐ Plain Greek yogurt, 32 oz
- ☐ Feta, small block
- ☐ Hummus (or make your own)
- ☐ Salmon fillets, 2
- ☐ Frozen corn, 1 bag

CANS & PANTRY

- ☐ Black beans, 3 cans
- ☐ Chickpeas, 2 cans
- ☐ White beans, 2 cans
- ☐ Kidney and pinto beans, 1 can each
- ☐ Red lentils, 1 cup dry
- ☐ Split peas, 1 lb
- ☐ Crushed tomatoes, 2 cans
- ☐ Coconut milk, 1 can (the can, not the carton)
- ☐ Peanut butter
- ☐ Tahini
- ☐ Olive oil
- ☐ Popcorn kernels
- ☐ Salsa, 1 jar

GRAINS, BREAD & SNACKS

- ☐ Old-fashioned oats
- ☐ Chia seeds
- ☐ Granola (check the sugar line)
- ☐ Quinoa
- ☐ Farro
- ☐ Bulgur
- ☐ Brown rice
- ☐ Orzo
- ☐ Whole grain bread, 1 loaf
- ☐ Whole wheat buns, 4
- ☐ Corn tortillas, 1 pack
- ☐ Wheat bran (for the muffins)
- ☐ Almonds and walnuts
- ☐ Dates (energy balls)
- ☐ Cocoa powder (brownies)

That's the week. When you're ready for round two, there are a couple hundred more recipes and kitchen fixes waiting at www.daily-life-hacks.com. The beans will be there when you get back.